

Message from the Director General, CISF

It is with humility and pride that I assume charge as Director General of this elite Force. CISF today occupies a unique place in the nation's security architecture, protecting vital sectors such as airports, ports, power plants, nuclear and space establishments, heritage sites and government buildings across the length and breadth of the country. This wide mandate brings diverse challenges that demand professionalism, efficiency and unity of purpose from each one of us.

Our foremost priority is to enhance operational preparedness. As security threats evolve, so must our skills. Continuous and integrated training, adoption of technology, and capacity building particularly in the field of Cyber security are essential to strengthen our readiness for emerging challenges.

Equally important is coordination with our stakeholders. Security is most effective when built on communication, trust and user-friendliness. Transparency and proactive engagement will help us achieve both operational excellence and institutional credibility.

For our leaders, I lay special emphasis on integrity, transparency, and clean work ethics. These values are non-negotiable, they build trust, ensure fairness and set the right example for our personnel.

The welfare of our personnel must remain at the heart of every decision. A leader must think from the perspective of the last man in the rank, encourage feedback and nurture an environment of care and respect.

I urge every member of CISF to uphold discipline, embrace innovation and stay committed to continuous learning. Together, with clarity of purpose and unity of effort, we will continue to keep our Force among the finest in the nation.

Jai Hind!
